Subject: CFP: The Body of Christ in the Art of the Spanish Americas

Now accepting paper abstracts for a proposed panel on images of the body of Christ in the Spanish Colonial Americas in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. Although the body of Christ has been addressed in detail in scholarship centered on medieval and early modern Europe, as both past panels at the Sixteenth Century Studies Conference and recent publications in fields such as art history, history, and religious studies attest, it has received far less attention within the context of the Spanish Colonial world. Moreover, the abundant discussions of Marian cults in the Spanish Americas have often overshadowed Christological devotion in the region. This panel seeks to focus attention upon the body of Christ and its many valences within the Spanish colonial world.

We seek papers that explore Christological imagery across media, especially those that position Christ's body as a contested site of religious, gender, ethnic, social, and sexual ideologies. Papers that question the intersections of these various ideologies as they relate to Christ's body are especially welcome, as are papers that offer new methodological or theoretical approaches to Christ's corpus. Possible topics and themes include, but are not limited to, Corpus Christi, eucharistic allegories, idolatrous images, icons, performed images, issues of materiality, theories of vision, issues of beauty and the grotesque, and pain and suffering.

Please send a 250-word abstract and a brief bio (or c.v.) to Derek Burdette and Lauren Kilroy-Ewbank by April 1. For more information about the conference, visit <http://www.sixteenthcentury.org/conference/>.
