Uncube Magazine, no. 33, Frei Otto

Franziska Stein

Uncube Magazine – online magazine for architecture and beyond No. 33 Frei Otto

This year’s Pritzker Architecture Prize was given to inventor, engineer, architect and visionist Frei Paul Otto, who passed away at the age of 89 on March 9, 2015 – two weeks prior to the expected official announcement.

Frei Otto was a man after uncube’s own heart, whose oeuvre stretched way beyond architecture. Thanks to our Berlin base, just around the corner from where Otto began his career, uncube was in a unique position to delve into the archives and talk to those who knew and worked with him.

Far more than a simple retrospective homage, this collection of insights, anecdotes and observations celebrates Frei Otto’s ground-breaking influence, research and structures with rarely seen archival images and material alongside essays of experts in research.

INTERVIEWS
[VIDEO] Frei Otto, “The Last Word First” – Pritzker Architecture Prize committee Martha Thorne travelled to Frei Otto’s home and studio in Warmbronn to inform him, that he had been named the 2015 Pritzker Prize Laureate.

ESSAYS

Go directly to our new issue here:
http://uncu.be/mBZnr3

uncube is a digital magazine for architecture and beyond. Against the constant humming of online news feeds, uncube offers a space to breathe. Berlin-based with an international perspective, we care about authorship, curated content, and looking good – with thoughtfully considered and beautifully designed graphics and spreads. uncube combines the ease of the internet with the sensibility of print: both reflexive to the current yet reflective of the longer view – and all delivered with a lightness of touch.

uncube magazine
Kantstraße 29
10623 Berlin