Atlas Versus the Cherry Tree: Museums, the Nation, and the World

April 14 (4:15-6:00 PM)

Venue: Weil Town Hall, Belfer Building (Lobby Level)

Harvard Kennedy School of Government

This activity is free of charge and open to the public

This panel activity will focus on analyzing how cutting-edge museums around the world are coping with immigration and globalization. If museums in the past were about creating national citizens, in this global world, to what extent do they now see themselves as creating global citizens too? What is it about how museums are funded, organized, and administered that makes them more or less outward-looking? How do art and ethnographic museums do this differently? What is it about the history and culture of particular cities and regions that helps explain their stance?
