

Artistic Exchange between the U.S. & Latin America (Washington 5–6 Oct 2011)

Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, D.C., Oct 5–06, 2011

Amelia Goerlitz

This two-day symposium will examine artistic exchange between Latin America and the United States from the late nineteenth century to the present. Papers will consider how artists and artworks have crossed the border separating the U.S. and Latin America (defined as Mexico, Central and South America, and the Caribbean), creating new artistic dialogues and influencing each other's work in meaningful ways.

Encuentros is the third of five Terra Symposia on American Art in a Global Context, which are supported by a generous grant from the Terra Foundation for American Art.

The event is free and open to the public. Online registration will open May 1st. The symposium also will be available for viewing in a simultaneous and, later, an archived webcast.
