ArtHist.net

Philosophy of Photography, 21st century photography: Art, philosophy, technique

Andrew Fisher, FAMU (Photography Department of the Academy of Performing Arts, Prague)

A special double issue of Philosophy of Photography is now out.

21st century photography: Art, philosophy, technique

The articles and the encyclopaedia entry published in this special double issue of Philosophy of Photography 6:1&2 stem from papers delivered at the conference 21st century photography: art, philosophy, technique co-organized by the journal and held at Central St Martins, University of the Arts London, 5–6 June 2015.

One key aim of the conference was to bridge the gap between aesthetic, philosophical and technological approaches to thinking about and using photographic images and to prompt participants from different backgrounds (including art, critical theory, philosophy, software & hardware studies) to engage concretely with each other in order to open new avenues for the critical interrogation of the role of technological images in contemporary culture.

The selection of articles testifies, we think, to the richness and variety of the debates that took place during the conference. They draw variously from phenomenology, deconstruction, post-Deleuzian thought, speculative realism and object oriented ontology, as well as from the traditions of Marxist cultural critique, literature, psychoanalysis, environmental debates about the anthropocene and cybernetics in order to question photography in its persistence as the dominant image form of the early twenty-first century.

Contents

Claire Colebrook, The becoming-photographic of cinema John Roberts The political economy of the image Peter Ainsworth, Evidence and Graham Harman's Third Table Rob Coley, Vector portraits, or, photography for the Anthropocene Mark Martinez, Photography as a machine organism: The cyberneticization of the photographic and techne as ethics John Hunting, Levinas and the photographic undergone Eileen Little, The singular photograph in durational time Anita Paz, Towards thinking in photography Dario Srbic, Fissures in the image of thought: Difference, photography and the networked image Adam Bales, Swiping Photoworks by Nicole Zaaroura and Ross Sinclair Antigoni Memou reviews Frances Stracey's Constructed Situations

ArtHist.net

Philosophy of Photography is an international peer-reviewed journal published six monthly in the spring and autumn. The journal's aim is to provide a forum for theoretical and critical debate of issues arising from the historical, political, cultural, scientific and critical matrix of ideas, practices and techniques that constitute photography as a multifaceted and changing form.

In a contemporary context characterised by its diversity and rapid rate of transformation, the conjunction of 'philosophy' and 'photography' in the journal's title is intended to provoke reflection on the ways in which existing and emergent discourses might engage with each other to inform our understanding of the photographic.

http://www.intellectbooks.co.uk/journals/view-Journal,id=186/

Reference:

TOC: Philosophy of Photography, 21st century photography: Art, philosophy, technique. In: ArtHist.net, Apr 9, 2016 (accessed Aug 2, 2025), https://arthist.net/archive/12657>.