

Faculty Position in the field of Graeco-Roman Classical Art, Tel Aviv University

Art History Department, Tel Aviv University

Application deadline: Feb 28, 2018

Sefy Hendler

The Department of Art History invites applications for a position in the field of Graeco-Roman Classical Art, with preference for candidates experienced in Graeco-Roman visual culture in the Land of Israel. Candidates should have research ability in the field of archaeology and material culture in the Ancient World.

The position involves teaching undergraduate and graduate courses in Classical art, and requires instructing MA and PhD students, management skills, dedication to the Department's aims, and the ability to teach in both Hebrew and English.

The position is open to applicants holding a PhD degree, with proven research ability and experience in teaching at a university level. The position can lead to tenure at the end of the trial period. The candidate may, in parallel, become a member of the Archaeological Institute at Tel Aviv University, in accordance with her or his skills and upon approval by the Institute's board of management.

The academic level and employment track will be determined according to the candidate's skills and experience. The appointment procedures are subject to the University protocol and to approval by the accredited academic institutes. The University reserves the right not to appoint any of the applicants.

A letter of application, curriculum vitae, and list of publications should be sent to the address below. Three letters of recommendation by senior researchers from institutions of higher learning should also be provided. These should be sent directly to the address below.

Deadline for submission: February 28, 2018

All documents should be sent to: Dr Sefy Hendler, Chairperson, Department of Art History, Tel Aviv University, Tel Aviv 6997801

And by email: sefy@post.tau.ac.il
