Call for Papers on three-dimensional art today

Publish your ideas on contemporary three dimensional art and tell us which topics, concepts, artists or places illustrate your ideas. Selected texts and their authors will be published and promoted through our channels. Please read the following carefully before submitting your proposal.

To mark the relaunch of its website (online from Monday 28 May) sculpture network is publishing thoughts, papers and essays on three dimensional art created in Europe today. We are offering selected texts and its authors a platform to promote themselves and their ideas, to an audience of around 30,000 people: art professionals, artists, mediators, collectors and friends of the arts in Europe and beyond.

Each of the selected texts will be featured throughout the sculpture network webpage and social media channels in two languages: English and German, with sculpture network undertaking the translation. An international jury will make the selection and only proposals that comply to the format requested, will be considered. The authors of the selected texts will also get a free sculpture network membership for one year.

Who can apply:

Art professionals, curators, teachers, mediators, PhD students

Application form: <https://sculpture-network.org/en/view/article/6815>

To apply fill in the application form where you will be required to submit the following:

- Written text expounding your ideas on three dimensional art today, in no less than 500 words (in English)
- A written declaration stating that the text is an original of the submitting author and not subject to publication restrictions
- Selection of 4 to 6 images to illustrate your text including authorization for publishing and corresponding photo credits
- Brief summary of your practice during the past 5 years
