Lorenzo Ciccarelli

Italy and the United Kingdom: Exchanges and Transcultural Influences in Postwar Architecture

International conference

Organised by Lorenzo Ciccarelli (Università degli Studi di Firenze) and Martina Caruso (British School at Rome)

This conference will investigate intellectual and cultural exchanges between British and Italian architects, urbanists and architecture historians in the postwar period. From 1945 to 1975 Italy and the United Kingdom experienced intense economic development and a radical re-organisation of urban space. In Italy, architects were involved in the transition from Fascism and Monarchy to the Republic. In Britain, the reconstruction period led to the government implementing a new social contract: the Welfare State. The ambitious social projects undertaken within this period stimulated growth and created opportunities for young British and Italian architects who were pioneering a critical stance against the modernist paradigm to achieve worldwide recognition. Countries such as Austria, France and Germany led the first battles for modern architecture in the early twentieth century, and yet it was in Italy and the UK that some of the most talented architects, bold engineers and refined critics emerged during the thirty years following the Second World War.

This conference seeks to explore the effective connections, mutual influences and exchanges between British and Italian architects, urbanists and historians between 1945 and 1975, notwithstanding the two countries' contrasting geographic and climatic conditions, levels of economic and industrial development and different social structures.
