Department of Philosophy and Cultural Heritage
ERC-2019-CoG Architectural Culture of the Early Modern Eastern Adriatic

The ERC research project, “Architectural Culture of the Early Modern Eastern Adriatic” (proposal number 865863), hosted by the Ca' Foscari University of Venice, benefits from the financial support of the European Research Council, starting in September 2020.

Historian of art and architecture, Jasenka Gudelj will lead an international research group investigating the impact of shifts within political, religious, cognitive and economic spheres in the borderland area of the Eastern Adriatic coast between 15th and 18th c., with focus on architecture as the most evident materialisation of a culture and its transformations.

We are currently looking for three pre-doctoral fellows with outstanding projects in one of the following research areas relevant to the ERC action:

- Early Modern Territoriality and Venetianization: urban changes and public buildings in the Eastern Adriatic;
- Catholic revival and religious architecture of the eastern Adriatic: Valier's visitation and its aftermath;
- Military architecture between theory and practice of the Early Modern Eastern Adriatic.

The successful candidates will enrol in a PhD program at the Department of Philosophy and Cultural Heritage, History of Art Curriculum.

A research proposal (of maximum 14,000 characters, including spaces, 1,5 spaced, languages: English, Italian) should be submitted including a survey of state of the art and a final bibliography (bibliography is excluded from the 14,000 characters). Preference will be given to candidates with basic knowledge of Croatian language.

Deadline: 21th April at 13:00 (Italian time)
