Winterthur's library and museum collections support a broad range of research in America's artistic, cultural, social, and intellectual history from the seventeenth century through the 1930s. Library collections are strong in American art and culture, with excellent supporting British and Continental materials. Object collections include 85,000 artifacts made or used in America from the seventeenth century through 1860. Among other topics, the collections will support research in domestic life, the history of manners, the body, travel and tourism, women's/men's culture, childhood, and in art history, material culture, and the decorative arts.

Winterthur's research program supports approximately 25 scholars a year; fellows may live in furnished houses on the estate. For information and application materials, please visit our website and view our on-line library catalog.
