

Re: Q: Origin of Arts Lab?

Kathleen Kimball

though i cannot offer the origins of the art lab, i am able to share that my ph.d. in world art and consciousness aims at re-uniting art history and art making. i offer this information not because it directly answers your query, but because i am happy to hear of efforts to address the relationship between the history and making aspects of art. best of luck in your ventures. kathleen kimball in new hampshire

Hilary Robinson <h.robinson@ulst.ac.uk> wrote:

> Dear friends,
> I teach at the University of Ulster in Belfast, Northern Ireland, in > a studio-led school of Art and Design, rather than an art history > department. My own research area is feminist approaches to art and > art history. Most recent publication: Feminism-Art-Theory 1968-2000, > (Oxford: Blackwells, 2001).
> > I am also research co-ordinator for the School, and am presently > trying to develop policies whereby the University can support its > studio/workshop based researchers. To this end I want to investigate > the concept of the Arts Lab. Present arts labs seem to be highly > technological, media labs. At present I can't find where the original > arts lab was, or what its intention was. Can anyone help?
> > Many thanks
> > Hilary Robinson.
>
> Dr. Hilary Robinson
> School of Art and Design > University of Ulster at Belfast
> York Street
> Belfast BT15 1ED
> Northern Ireland
> UK

Reference:

Q: Re: Q: Origin of Arts Lab?. In: ArtHist.net, Jan 8, 2002 (accessed Jul 13, 2025), <<https://arthist.net/archive/24820>>.