ArtHist net

Free Expression in the Arts, NY Nov.20-21

H-ArtHist - Donandt -

Nov. 20-21, Columbia University

Date: Wed, 23 Oct 2002 10:41:49 -0400

From: x-post: NINCH-ANNOUNCE <david@ninch.org>

NATIONAL ARTS JOURNALISM PROGRAM TO HOST NOV. 20-21 CONFERENCE ON ISSUES OF FREE EXPRESSION IN THE ARTS

Disputes about free expression in the arts have always loomed as struggles between creativity and repression, transgression and outrage, candor and hypocrisy. From "Lady Chatterley's Lover" to Andres Serrano's "Piss Christ," the sequence has been predictable: Scandalized citizens, religious leaders or politicians fire an opening salvo of protest or funding cuts. Then artists, invoking the muses and the First Amendment, fire back, accusing their accusers of obtuseness and mindless censorship. While high-profile shootouts at art museums and less visible skirmishes at libraries and theaters persist, overt censorship is no longer the only, or the most dire, threat to free expression. The current terrain bears little resemblance to the "culture war" battlegrounds of a decade ago, much less to what the First Amendment's framers could have imagined.

The NAJP will address this ever-shifting terrain in "The New Gatekeepers: A Conference on Free Expression in the Arts," Nov. 20 and 21 at the Columbia University Graduate School of Journalism. The conference will bring together a cross-disciplinary group of participants — artists, technologists, media executives, lawmakers, museum curators, theater producers, legal experts, government regulators, free-speech advocates, and of course journalists — to explore the shifting frontiers of free-expression in the arts and search for workable solutions for the future.

http://www.najp.org/conferences/gatekeepers/panels.htm

Speakers Include:

Cass Sunstein, professor of law, University of Chicago
Rochelle Gurstein, author, "The Repeal of Reticence"
Marjorie Heins, author and director, Free Expression Policy Project
Louis Menand, author, "The Metaphysical Club"; and professor, Graduate Center,
City University of New York
Amy Adler, professor of law, Columbia University

Carol Becker, dean, School of the Art Institute of Chicago

Breck Rice, founder and chief operating officer, MovieMask

Peggy Ahwesh, media artist and filmmaker;

Max Anderson, director, Whitney Museum and president, Association of Art

Museum Directors

Roberto Bedoya, arts consultant

Marian Godfrey, director, Culture Programs, The Pew Charitable Trusts;

Saralyn Reece Hardy, director/curator, Salina Art Center and Cinema

Timothy McClimon, executive director, AT&T Foundation

Neal Gabler, journalist

Douglas Rushkoff, journalist

Jennifer Toomey, musician and executive director, Future of Music Coalition

Charles Mann, contributing editor, The Atlantic Monthly

Richard Masur, actor and former president, Screen Actors Guild

Gigi Sohn, president, Public Knowledge

Siva Vaidhyanathan, author and assistant professor, New York University

Allan Adler, vice president for government and legal affairs, American Association of Booksellers

Barbara Hoffman, art lawyer

Beryl Howell, senior counselor to the chairman, Senate Judiciary Committee

Wendy Seltzer, founder, The Chilling Effects Clearinghouse, Harvard University

Paul DiMaggio, director of cultural policy studies, Princeton University

Cathleen McGuigan, senior cultural affairs editor, Newsweek

David Resnicow, president and founder, Resnicow Schroeder Associates

Danyel Smith, author and former editor in chief, Vibe

Reference:

CONF: Free Expression in the Arts, NY Nov.20-21. In: ArtHist.net, Oct 24, 2002 (accessed Nov 23, 2025), https://arthist.net/archive/25251.