

MA in Art History in London (Richmond American International University)

WALLIS ROBERT

Dear h-arthist,

I write to the list in the hope that list subscribers will consider referring students who are ready for graduate study and seeking a challenging MA in Art History, to our MA program at Richmond, The American International University in London.

The Richmond MA, is unique in its intercultural orientation. The MA recognizes and embraces new thought and research methodologies in the field. Now in its fifth year, our 12 month, accredited program offers students the opportunity to examine appropriate methods for the study of both Western and non-Western art. There is also sustained contextual and theoretical consideration of the interrelationships between visual culture and the historical movements of Colonialism, Orientalism, and Primitivism.

In the second semester, there is an option to study Modernism in London or to spend the semester at the University's study center in Florence, Italy focusing on art and cultural interaction during the Renaissance.

In addition to an outstanding teaching faculty, the Richmond program offers students the opportunity to study in the splendid libraries, galleries, and museums of London and Florence. London is the hub of the modern art world; Florence, the hub of Renaissance studies. The diversity of art experiences available via these resources creates a challenging environment for engagement with the visual arts.

We welcome the opportunity of working with your students. Please note that the deadline for submission is the 31 March, 2003. Feel free to contact me directly by email at <robert.wallis@richmond.ac.uk> or by telephone on +44 (0)20 7368 8381. Please also visit our website at <http://www.richmond.ac.uk/ma>.

Yours sincerely,
