Low Countries Sculpture Society.

Calendar of Events - Fall 2003.

Saturday 16 and Sunday 17 August 2003

Study visits around Groningen (Saturday) and in Leeuwarden (Sunday) on the theme of Discovering hidden historic sculpture in Friesland and Groningen including major works by Rombout Verhulst and the recently conserved studio content of Pier Pander.

Friesland and Groningen boast some spectacular sculpture that few people know. The first day will principally be spent discussing marble tomb monuments (by Rombout Verhulst) and church furniture in villages surrounding the city of Groningen. The outbuildings of the country house that, in the nineteenth century replaced the seventeenth-century house of important patrons of Verhulst, now house the national carriage museum with some interesting sculptural connections. The theme of the next day will be introduced at Jelsum, where we will see the earliest extant plaster sculpture in the Netherlands, recently conserved by Terwen Consultancy. The Sunday will have the highlight of the Pier Pander collection of plaster models as well as a few terracotta, plasticine and marble works the conservation of which is nearing completion (also by Terwen Consultancy).

Led by Art Historian and Sculpture Conservator
Pier Terwen

« Sculpture and Devotion in the Rhineland »

ANNUAL TOUR 2003 from Kleve to Köln

Saturday 20 to Monday 22 September 2003

The lower Rhineland was a fertile ground for Catholic devotion in the late Middle Ages and despite the iconoclastic revolts of the later 16th century and the world wars, many altars survive. The tour will spend the first two days principally looking at and discussing the sculpture in churches and museums in Kalkar, Xanten, Kleve and elsewhere in the region, some of which are packed with late medieval sculpture.

The principal artists we will encounter are Arnt van Swol, Jan Borman and Arnt van Tricht as well as many local artists who imitated the frequent imports of altarpieces from Brussels and particularly Antwerpen.

On the Sunday afternoon we will travel down to Köln, where a visit of two of the many important churches will give us a flavour of the history and transformation of church sculpture in this metropole between the Romanesque and the 20th century, themes that will also be pursued the next morning in a visit of the principal sculpture in the cathedral (among others by Cornelis Floris, 1514-75) and the Schnütgen Museum.

Partly led by the Art Historians Guido de Werd, Director Kurhaus Kleve, and Dr Hiltrud Westermann-Angerhausen, Director Schnütgen Museum, Köln

Only for members : membership from 15 euro per annum and registration for this study visit on www.lowcountriessculpture.org. Tour all in price: 295 euro; 50 euro single room supplement.

Closing date for annual tour applications: 31 July 2003

On the Monday afternoon, a half-day symposium organised together with the Schnütgen Museum will conclude the study trip and offer an opportunity to further discuss the issues encountered on the tour and open up the discussion towards the later periods and how these interpreted and adapted their attitude towards sculpture and devotion.
