

American Art Now (18 Oct 2003 – Williamstown, MA)

Mark Ledbury

Announcement: Symposium American Art Now
Saturday 18 October 2003. Clark Art Institute, Williamstown, Massachusetts

Clark Symposium: "American Art Now: Aesthetics and Politics"

What are the aesthetic and political advantages, particularly today, of the lack of a single direction in contemporary American art Does

it make sense anymore to speak categorically of "what's American," especially in an increasingly international art world

This Clark

Symposium will focus on questions related to the meaning and significance of contemporary American art. Panelists will consider both American and non-American points of view. After a morning of presentations, invited speakers, including art historians, critics, and curators, will join in a dialogue with the audience.
Tickets are $20 for non-members, $15 for members and students.
