Call for Papers

The Art History Graduate Association (AHGA) at the University of Virginia is seeking papers which explore the relationships between politics and art. Papers may incorporate political theory, address the longstanding interaction between politics and art, and should be rooted in historical, art historical, or literary analysis. Possible themes include, but are not limited to: images of political power in classical sculpture, representations of kings and Crusaders in illuminated manuscripts, the artistic patronage of ruling families during the Renaissance, political monuments in public art, political satire and caricature, and the enduring tradition of art as activism.

Papers are welcome from graduate students working in all disciplines and historical periods, Western and non-Western. A one-page abstract, without identifying information, and curriculum vitae are due by May 1, 2004. Please include a separate cover page with your name, paper title, e-mail address, phone number, university department, and departmental address. For more information, contact Jessica Stewart at jls2bd@virginia.edu.

By May 1, 2004, mail or e-mail submissions to:
