

Instructor-Assistant Professor, Cyprus

michael walsh

Job Opportunity:

ART HISTORY - Instructor / Assistant Professor / Associate Professor

Eastern Mediterranean University

Cyprus

Applications are invited from qualified candidates for the position of Art Historian for the academic year commencing September 2004. Ph.D. preferred; M.A. in Art History required. Applicants must be able to work with a student body whose second language is English. It is preferable that candidates have current publishing projects. Though it is by no means essential, it would be ideal for the department to recruit an art historian with research interests in the Mediterranean. Candidates whose research interests are outside this field are encouraged to apply nevertheless.

Present departmental teaching emphasis and research falls in the following areas: 19th & 20th Century painting, sculpture and architecture in Europe and North America; Critical thinking in Art, Art and Semiotics; Islamic Art; Romanesque and Gothic Architecture; Greece & Rome; Britain in the Machine Age; Modernism and Post-Modernism; American Art and Architecture after the First World War; Methodology of Art History.
