ANNOUNCING H-Stained-Glass: H-Net Network on Architectural Stained Glass

Member of: H-Net: Humanities and Social Sciences Online

ABOUT H-Stained-Glass

H-Stained-Glass is a moderated internet discussion forum whose purpose is to provide a world-wide exchange of information for individuals engaged in historic research, documentation and preservation of architectural stained glass. The list provides a forum for reporting research findings on the history of stained glass artists and studios, styles, techniques and iconography; discussing the relationship of architectural stained glass to cultural traditions; raising issues related to repair, restoration and preservation; reviewing books and articles; and sharing of information about exhibitions, conferences, seminars, calls for papers, academic programs, training workshops, and grant and employment opportunities.

H-Stained-Glass is free and open to anyone who is interested in architectural stained glass. Scholars and advanced students in the fields of art history, architectural history and religious history, church and synagogue administrators and archivists, museum curators and conservators, historic preservationists, librarians, teachers, architects, and stained glass artists and restorers are especially invited to join.
