Lecturer in Art History

Faculty of Arts
New Zealand

Vacancy Number A452-04

We are seeking to appoint a Lecturer for a new, full-time position in the area of Contemporary Visual Arts and Theory. The successful applicant would need to have specialist knowledge in new and recent media and technologies, as well as knowledge of, and expertise in, 20th century visual arts and related theories generally, in particular modernist and postmodernist and photographic.

Applicants should either have a PhD or be able to demonstrate that their PhD is close to completion. In addition, the successful applicant would have substantial teaching experience at university level, as well as a strong publication record. Involvement, besides teaching and research, in the contemporary art world would be an advantage, as would experience in administration.

It is planned that the position would be filled from the beginning of the new academic year in New Zealand in 2005 (1 February). Applicants should include two pieces of published work and full CVs with their applications.

Two academic referees are required.
