Museum in Motion? intends to trace the history of the critical correlation between contemporary art and the museum, to chart the various institutional responses, and to place this within the broader context of socio-political changes. The title literally refers to one of the most important publications of the 1970s on the museum discussion of that era: Museum in Motion? The modern art museum at issue / Museum in Beweging? Het museum voor moderne kunst ter discussie, published in 1979. Speakers will discuss the fundamental changes that have occurred since its publication precisely one quarter of a century ago.

The conference Museum in Motion? will comprise two meeting formats.

On Friday 12 November, a symposium with invited speakers is held at Museum Het Domein in Sittard. On Saturday 13 November, a seminar is organized that presents three sessions, two of which are based on an international call for papers, and a third on the results of a closed architecture competition at the Jan van Eyck Academie in Maastricht.
