Northumbria University

Lecturer
Film Studies
History of Modern Art, Design and Film, School of Arts and Social Sciences

Ref. ASS04/05

In order to develop its work in the history of modern visual culture, the School of Arts and Social Sciences wishes to appoint a specialist in the area of Film Studies. It is envisaged that the post-holder would contribute to both undergraduate and postgraduate teaching in Film Studies. It is hoped that s/he would also work with colleagues in the History of Art, Design and Film Subject Division to develop Television Studies as a distinct area of provision within the School. The successful candidate will be encouraged to pursue their individual research interests and to participate in collaborative research initiatives in the School and University.

Salary: Lecturer £23,643 - £29,479 per annum
