

American Art – vol. 19 no. 1 – 2005

CYNTHIA MILLS

The Smithsonian American Art Museum is pleased to announce the publication of the Spring 2005 issue of American Art, the scholarly journal published by the University of Chicago Press for the museum. This issue includes a special package of essays on artists' homes and studios.

Here is the table of contents
for volume 19, no. 1:

Wanda Corn

Artists' Homes and Studios: A Special Kind of Archive

Thayer Tolles

The Saint-Gaudens National Historic Site and Chesterwood

Julie Schimmel

The Eanger Irving and Virginia Couse Home and Garden

Debra Bricker Balken

The Frelinghuysen Morris House & Studio

Joyce Hill Stoner

The N. C. Wyeth Studio

Stacy Morgan

Clementine Hunter and Melrose Plantation

Ellen G. Landau

The Pollock-Krasner House and Study Center

Kristin Schwain

F. Holland Day's 'Seven Last Words' and the Religious Roots of American Modernism

Sidra Stich

Conceptual Alchemy: A Conversation with John Baldessari

Sarah Burns

Ordering the Artist's Body: Thomas Eakins's Acts of Self-Portrayal

Jane Livingston

Richard Avedon (1923–2004): Wanting to Understand Everything, to Express Everything

American Art is a peer-reviewed periodical published three times per year, in March, July and November. Articles may encompass any aspect of America's visual heritage, including the fine arts, popular culture, photography and electronic media, public art, architecture, and the decorative arts.

American Art is now being published in both print and electronic editions by the University of Chicago Press for the Smithsonian American Art Museum. Information about submitting manuscripts, ordering subscriptions or single copies, reprint rights, and advertising symposia and other events in the journal can be found at:

<http://www.journals.uchicago.edu/AmArt> .

Reference:

TOC: American Art - vol. 19 no. 1 - 2005. In: ArtHist.net, Mar 29, 2005 (accessed Jul 30, 2025), <<https://arthist.net/archive/27072>>.