

Meister der Magdalenen-Legende, Christian 2. of Denmark

Mikael Boegh

Dear members of H-ArtHist,

I am presently working on a project on portraiture at the Danish Museum of National History at Frederiksborg Castle north of Copenhagen, Denmark. In our collection there is a very peculiar portrait of the Danish King, Christian II, attributed to the so-called Master of the Legend of St. Mary Magdalen (Meister der Magdalenen-Legende). It shows the king half length, in three-quarter-profile to the right, holding in his hands a miniature version of his own portrait. Please visit the museum website in order to see the painting:

<http://www.multishoppen.dk/showdetails.aspx?ID=1948&tour=False&pageID=1>

Or:

www.frederiksborgmuseet.dk/

(then click "online katalog" and type "Christian 2." In the boks "Person på maleri". The fifth painting listed (inv.no. A 4371) is the one referred to here.)

My question goes:

There exists a replica of this painting, 35 x 27 cm, which was in the collection of the Swiss businessman Walter E. Boveri. The Boveri collection was sold after the death of Mrs. Boveri in 1990, and this is where I lose track of it. Does anyone know where the painting might be today? Please let me know!

Yours sincerely,

Mikael Bøgh Rasmussen, ph.d.

Det Museum of National History at Frederiksborg Castle

DK-3400 Hillerød

Denmark

(+45) 48 20 1434

mb@frbmus.dk

Reference:

Q: Meister der Magdalenen-Legende, Christian 2. of Denmark. In: ArtHist.net, May 19, 2005 (accessed Jul 15, 2025), <<https://arthist.net/archive/27248>>.