CALL FOR PAPERS:

Looking at the Overlooked in Quattrocento Architecture and Architectural Treatises

Deadline: 20 May 2006

RSA Renaissance Society of America Annual Meeting,
San Francisco 23-25 March 2006

Quattrocento architecture and architectural treatises are studied almost exclusively by scholars of art history, who usually disregard elements not related to their traditional domain, such as ritual, magic, astrology, cosmology, alchemy, Egypt, travel literature, utopia, ideal city, architecture parlante, art of memory. Sessions will focus on the early Italian Renaissance, especially on Filarete and Francesco di Giorgio Martini. But other proposals are very welcome. Also invited are unusual perspectives regarding occult versus humanism, medieval tradition versus revival of antiquity, tradition and revival versus invention.
