Gilles Deleuze: the passage from noise to voice

The conference on Deleuze is an invitation to consider a certain 'passage from noise to voice' in 'The twenty-sixth series of language' of 'The logic of sense', with the intention of opening up Deleuzian philosophy to various ways of deterritorialisations from different viewpoints, such as from the viewpoints of Leibniz, Kant, Hegel, Nietzsche, Lacan, Derrida, and quantum theory.

The passage in question serves as a basis for questioning the strategies invented by Deleuze for warding off the return of a moment of synthesis – be it in his formulation of 'sense', 'expression', 'event' or 'paradoxical element'. What can be gained from defining 'the birth of language', or 'the birth of the subject' by referring to such a passage, realised purely, by 'the event of all events', which Deleuze describes as 'Univocity'? In other words, if this event is what triggers the resonance between the series, so that sound is differentiated from noise, then it also raises the question whether a former passage has already taken place even before this 'event of all the events' – on the basis of a re-appropriation of what has been disappropriated since the beginning of 'The logic of sense'.

This question will hopefully bring about further openings in other Deleuzian passages, for instance, from pre-individual singularities to singularities and individuation; from milieus and refrains to music; from a radical discontinuity to continuity; from a-topology to topology; or from the audible to the specular.
