Synopsis: This year's symposium and exhibition will delve into the current trends that have emerged from postcolonialism in both academic scholarship and contemporary artistic practice. At its conception, postcolonialism encompassed both the analysis of colonial discourse and the writings of the ex-colonized. More recently, it has evolved to define writings that resist colonialism in all its manifestations and examines the body of culture impacted by imperialism up to the present day. Globalization and the increasing closeness of peripheral territories have had a large affect on postcolonial studies, with some even arguing that globalization renders postcolonialism obsolete. Paper submissions taking up these theoretical concerns can come from all time periods. Art historical papers are preferred, but submissions from other fields in the Humanities will also be considered. Artworks incorporating issues of globalization, transnationalism, or multiculturalism are strongly encouraged for submittal.

Eligibility: Submissions will be accepted from currently enrolled MA, MFA, and PhD students as well as those who have received degrees in 2005.

How to propose artwork: Submit 3-6 digital slides, VHS or DVD (multi-standard formats please), artist statement relevant to proposed work, description of installation requirements, brief Curriculum Vitae, and contact email.
