The Executive Committee of the Seventh Annual Graduate Symposium on Women's and Gender History at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign announces a call for papers. The Symposium, which is part of activities on campus in recognition of Women's History Month, is scheduled for March 9-11, 2006. To celebrate and encourage further work in the field of women's and gender history, we invite submissions from graduate students from any institution and discipline on topics in women's and gender history that address the theme of "Mobility." Papers or panels may address, but should not be limited to the following:

- Performativity and the Body
- Cosmopolitanisms
- Boundaries and Restraints: Material and Imagined
- Intra- and Trans-national flows of goods and ideas
- Social Mobility
- The Construction and Experience of Public and Private Spaces
- Globalization and Feminist Theory

We welcome papers on any historical subject that might grow out of a variety of disciplines and engage diverse methodologies. We also invite panel submissions consisting of three papers, although each of the three papers will be judged on its individual merit. In addition, we encourage papers and panels analyzing the state of the field in women's and gender history. Preference will be given to scholars who did not present a paper at last year's Sixth Annual Graduate Symposium on Women's and Gender History.

We are pleased to announce that Jennifer L. Morgan, Associate Professor of History and Women's and Gender Studies at Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey and author of Laboring Women: Reproduction and Gender in New World Slavery (University of Pennsylvania Press, 2004) will deliver the keynote address, "Accounting for the Women in Slavery: Demography and Epistemology in Early African American History" on Thursday, March 9th.

We are also thrilled to announce that the journal Gender & History will again be sponsoring a prize for the best graduate student paper presented at the Symposium. Presenters at the conference will also have the opportunity to publish their work in the on-line proceedings volume.

We have limited funds available to assist with the cost of travel
