

Assist Prof Art History/Archaeology (3 Pos., Univ. N. Cyprus)

Michael Walsh

Full Time: Two Assistant Professors in Art History and one in Archaeology

Department of Archaeology and Art History
Faculty of Arts and Sciences,
Eastern Mediterranean University,
N. Cyprus

Job Description: Art History

Two enthusiastic art historians are sought to join this dynamic young department (Archaeology and Art History Department) and become a team player in a constant program of expansion and development within the university. Though the department would welcome research interests in the art and / or architecture of the region, this is by no means a requirement and all applicants, in all fields of research and teaching, are encouraged to apply.

Qualifications

The successful candidate will teach 4 courses per semester depending on his/her research and publishing record. Applicants must be able to work with a student body whose second language is English. A Ph.D. in Art History (any period) is required and a strong publishing record is preferable.

Further inquiries may be submitted to Dr. Sheelagh Frame, Department of Archaeology and Art History, Eastern Mediterranean University, via Mersin-10, Turkey, Tel: +(90)-392-630-2407, E-mail: sheelagh.frame@emu.edu.tr or Michael.walsh@emu.edu.tr

Term of Employment

EMU offers a competitive salary. The initial appointment is for eleven months starting September 15, 2006, renewable for two years, contingent upon successful performance.

Dead Line : May 10 2006.

Job Description: Archaeology

The Archaeology and Art History Department invites applications for assistant professorship in Archaeology, to commence Sept. 2006. The area of research is open, although candidates with experience in the Eastern Mediterranean, or who have expertise in paleobotany or underwater archaeology are particularly encouraged to apply. In addition to contributing survey courses and core courses in the major the candidate may be teaching in the university's new General Education Program. The successful candidate will have the opportunity to provide upper level and graduate courses in the area of specialization.

Qualifications

A Ph.D. in Archaeology or Anthropology is required by the time of appointment. A strong commitment to excellence in teaching and evidence of scholarly potential are essential.
