Chino Kaori Memorial Essay Prize, 2006

Deadline: June 1, 2006

We are pleased to announce the fourth annual Chino Kaori Memorial Essay Prize. The University of Hawai'i Press is graciously sponsoring this prize with a gift of 400 dollars in books from their catalogue that will be awarded to the prize recipient. The prize is administered by the Japan Art History Forum (JAHF), which will also award the winner a complimentary two-year JAHF membership. In addition, the prize recipient will receive a copy of the most recently published annual "Chino Kaori Memorial 'New Visions' Lecture," sponsored by the Center for the Study of Women, Buddhism, and Cultural History and the Medieval Japanese Studies Institute, Kyoto.

This is an annual competition, open to graduate students from any university. The prize will be awarded to the best research paper written in English on a Japanese Art History topic and submitted to the selection committee by the deadline. Papers should be under 10,000 words (in Times New Roman, 12 point, double spaced) and not previously published. The selection committee will post an abstract of the winning paper on the JAHF website.

The deadline for submission of papers is June 1, 2006.

The 2006 selection committee is Chelsea Foxwell (the elected JAHF graduate student representative, Columbia University), Jonathan Reynolds (University of Southern California), Gennifer Weisenfeld (Duke University), Joshua Mostow (University of British Columbia), and Toshio Watanabe (University of the Arts London).

Submissions should be made by email. Texts should be in Microsoft Word; Illustrations should be in MS Power Point with individual illustration images no larger than 75 dpi and the total Power Point file no larger than 4 MB.

Submissions not complying with the specifications will not be accepted. Please direct submissions and questions to gennifer.weisenfeld@duke.edu
