Amsterdam, The Netherlands

Professor of Modern Art History f/m
For 0,8 fte

Vacancynumber 1.2006.00259

The Faculty of Arts, Department of Art & Culture, Art History chair group, has a vacancy for a professor of Modern Art History.

The Faculty of Arts is made up of five departments. The Department of Art & Culture is responsible for the degree courses in Art History and Cultural Studies, and consists of five chair groups:
Modern Art History, Cultural Studies, Architectural History & Heritage
Studies and Early Modern Art History. Modern Art History is one of the leading groups in its field in the Netherlands. This position is available from June 1st 2007.

Duties

The successful candidate will:

- * be familiar with recent international developments in the field of the visual arts;
- * be familiar with art theory and notions of artistry, with the theory and practice of art criticism, with the art market, with the art media, with museum policy and with the world of collecting;
- * have good contacts with museums in the Netherlands and abroad;
- * be prepared to adopt an innovative policy designed to give the Department of Art & Culture a clear profile and to intensify the internationalisation of its teaching and research;

* be expected to take the initiative in reforming the education provided by the faculty, at both BA and MA levels.

Requirements

The successful candidate will:

- * hold a doctorate in Art History or a closely related subject;
- * have an excellent research reputation, as demonstrated by a substantial portfolio of high-quality academic publications;
- * be a dedicated and inspiring teacher, as demonstrated by positive educational evaluations;
- * combine methodological depth with an open attitude towards and experience with the art history profession;
- * have an international orientation, as demonstrated by participation in international research projects and networks. Ideally, the new professor's research work will be internationally comparative in its approach;
- * have an interdisciplinary orientation, as demonstrated by a readiness to work closely with the other chair groups in the Department of Art & Culture and with other groups within and beyond the Faculty of Arts;
- * possess demonstrable managerial experience and inspiring leadership qualities;
- * have proven success in attracting indirect and contract funding;
- * have experience in supervising PhD students.
