The Phillips Collection Announces Annual $5,000 Prize for First Book Manuscript

WHAT: The Phillips Collection Center for the Study of Modern Art announces an annual prize of $5,000, called The Phillips Book Prize, for a first book manuscript that clearly communicates new research in modern or contemporary art from 1880 to the present. The winner will have his or her manuscript published by the University of California Press - part of a series of first books - and will be invited to give public presentations at the Phillips in fall 2007.

The jury will favor those subjects related to the artists and interests reflected in The Phillips Collection's areas of collecting. Authors who have completed a Ph.D. within the preceding five years are especially encouraged to apply. Scholars who have had books published are not eligible.

HOW TO ENTER: Entries must include a cover letter; CV; three letters of recommendation sent under a separate cover; book abstract (one page); and a proposal (8 - 10 pages), including an overview of the project, chapter outlines, plan for revision of the manuscript into a book, and scholarly area of focus within the field of modern/contemporary art.
