

CRL Digitization Project Survey: Decorative Arts & Architecture

Bernie Reilly

The Center for Research Libraries is a not-for-profit consortium of over 200 universities, colleges and independent research libraries. CRL supports advanced research in the humanities, sciences and social sciences by ensuring the survival and availability of knowledge resources critical to those disciplines.

H-Net and CRL are exploring the idea of extended uses of H-Net's networks to assist in the development of CRL's collections and create new content possibilities for H-Net. As a preliminary effort to gauge interest and feasibility, the H-Net Council and the editor of this list have given permission for us to distribute the following very brief survey. We hope that interested scholars will take just a moment to review it and answer if appropriate to their research interests.

CRL is contemplating a digitization project dealing with early modern architecture and decorative arts in the United States and United Kingdom. We will probably begin by digitizing four or five journal titles. The following list includes titles that we are considering. It would be quite useful to have the views of scholars and academic researchers on the relative value of these titles, to help us prioritize our digitization work.

More specifically, it would be good to have from the appropriate H-Net communities an "off-the-cuff" sense of which five of these titles would be the most useful in their research. We would also welcome their suggestions of what additional titles we might consider. Those subscribers who would like to assist us in this effort should number the journals they select from 1 to 5 (5=highest priority, 1=lowest) and feel free to offer any comments or suggestions about the utility and significance of the item(s). Replies can be sent at the address in the signature below.

Thank you for your time and consideration,
