English Heritage protects and provides advice on this country's unique legacy of historic buildings, landscapes and archaeological sites. We also manage over 400 sites and welcome in excess of 11 million visitors to these each year. Knowledge is the prerequisite for caring successfully for England's historic environment. It enriches enjoyment and underpins the process of change. As either a Senior Investigator or an Investigator, you will play a key role in a small, busy team, researching and analysing historic buildings and areas. You will provide authoritative professional and specialist advice in the fields of architectural history and building and areas analysis, and assist with training and outreach programmes. You will also contribute to the development of new research projects that support the needs of the historic environment. Although you are primarily based in our Cambridge office, you will be required to travel widely, which will include staying overnight.

You should have a good degree or post-graduate qualification (or equivalent) in history, architectural history, buildings archaeology or a related discipline, and a good record of academic publication. You will have a broad knowledge of architectural history with a specialism in one or more areas, as well as being accomplished in analysing buildings and areas and in undertaking primary research.
