

Terra Foundation Fellowship at the Newberry Library

Research

"The Terra Foundation for American Art History Fellowship at the Newberry Library will enable a scholar to advance a significant project about historical American art (pre-1980) using resources in any Chicago area collections. Applicants must have held the Ph.D. for at least three years prior to September 1, 2008. The fellowship carries an academic-year stipend of $70,000 for a full professor (or its equivalent outside the academy) and $50,400 for all other awardees. The award includes a stipend for a graduate student research assistant and a modest budget for local travel. The Terra Foundation Fellow will participate in the Newberry's community of scholars, offer two public lectures, and be available to visit at least one graduate seminar in the Chicago area.

Metropolitan Chicago offers a vast range of resources in the history of American art. A summary introduction to these resources is available in Betty Blum Art-related Archival Materials in the Chicago Area (1991), which is available online at <http://www.aaa.si.edu/resources/publications/guidechicago/pdfs/chicago.pdf>."
