

Lecturer in Art History (Univ. of Adelaide)

Catherine Speck

Lecturer in Art History
School of History and Politics

The University of Adelaide
South Australia 5005

We are seeking to appoint an experienced scholar to teach postgraduate and undergraduate courses in art history (Renaissance through nineteenth century) and to assist in the delivery of the Art History Graduate programs, which are offered in collaboration with the Art Gallery of South Australia. The area of research specialisation is open, although the successful candidate will have interests and publications that are cognate with existing strengths in the Discipline of History. You will also need to demonstrate the capacity to liaise effectively with the Art Gallery of South Australia and may be expected to contribute to the teaching of the Discipline of History's undergraduate courses.

You should have:

- a PhD in Art History or a closely related discipline (e.g. History, or Visual Studies/Culture)
- a strong record of research and publications in the form of monograph (s) and/or articles in refereed journals
- evidence of teaching experience and a demonstrated ability to communicate positively and effectively with students

Salary: Lecturer (Level B) Dollar 64,757 - 76,900 per annum.

An employer superannuation contribution of 17% applies.

This tenurable position is available from June 2008.

Further information, including the selection criteria, may be obtained from Professor David Lemmings, Head, School of History and Politics, telephone: (08) 8303 5610 or email: david.lemmings@adelaide.edu.au.
