

American Art History Symposium (Yale Univ., 26 Apr 08)

Crawford Alexander Mann

CALL FOR PAPERS

Fifth Annual American Art History Symposium - Yale University

Saturday, April 26, 2008

Keynote Address: Rachael DeLue, Princeton University

The Department of History of Art at Yale University announces its fifth annual American Art History Symposium. The organizers seek proposals from graduate students whose work both exemplifies creative modes of inquiry and breaks with established critical approaches to the study of American Art. We welcome submissions addressing any medium or period.

Abstracts of approximately 500 words for papers not to exceed 20 minutes in length should be received, along with a CV, by Monday, 14 January for consideration. Selected speakers will be notified by Monday, 25 February.

This year, we will be expanding the traditional symposium format in an effort to encourage dialogue among the participants and initiate focused discussion on the role of a distinctly "American" art history within the context of globalization. Selected speakers will be asked to submit extended abstracts along with images, which will be distributed to the other panelists ahead of time. We hope that through this process our discussions might take the form of a workshop for ideas on the current state of the field and possible new directions in the study of American art.

Please e-mail materials to americanist.symposium@gmail.com

Reference:

CFP: American Art History Symposium (Yale Univ., 26 Apr 08). In: ArtHist.net, Jan 14, 2008 (accessed Jul 31, 2025), <<https://arthist.net/archive/30005>>.