Lectureship in Japanese Studies: Contemporary Visual Cultures

School of Languages, Linguistics and Cultures

<http://www.jobs.ac.uk/jobs/ZH572/>

Applications are invited for a permanent Lectureship in Japanese Studies, for which initial funding has been generously provided by the GB Sasakawa Foundation. You should have research and teaching interests in Japanese visual cultures (e.g. film, anime, manga, art, language, translation and electronic media technologies) in the broad sense; those with interests in other areas of visual culture are also encouraged to apply. You should have completed a PhD and have a research agenda, a developing record of publications, and a commitment to making grant applications to further this agenda. You will contribute to the Japanese Studies teaching programmes at all levels. Japanese Studies began at Manchester in 2007 and this post offers applicants an exciting opportunity to join this new academic venture and play a key role in shaping its research culture and teaching profile.
