X-LArch III 2009

April 29 - 30, 2009

Vienna, Austria

Study Tours offered on May 1st, 2009

Key-note speakers:

Marc Treib (Professor of Architecture, University of California, Berkeley, USA)

Helen Armstrong (Professor-Emeritus of Landscape Architecture, Queensland, University of Technology; Adjunct-Professor, Centre for Cultural Research, University of Western Sydney, AUS)

Conference topics: changing landscape uses, urban landscapes, landscape architecture and the design of the public realm, sustainability, migration, history of landscape, community development

In the year of 2008, 50% of the people worldwide are living in cities, and this number is yet to increase. Globally the structures of landscapes and settlements are converging - resulting in undistinguishable types of urbanity. This has given rise to the prominence of 'landscape' in the search for sustainable development.

The production of landscape has always been based on a construct of ideas. As ideas shift along societal changes, the meaning of landscape is subject to constant mutation. Designed and built landscapes function as a catalogue of interpretations of nature, of society, of economics, of cultures.

What role can landscape play to restructure our decision and design-processes, our environment and our perception?

The conference wants to foster exchange and debate among researchers from across Europe and beyond. It provides a forum for cross-national and cross-disciplinary debate on the future of urbanity and landscape and acts as a bridge between research and practitioners.

Call for Papers:

The conference LANDSCAPE - GREAT IDEA! is looking for research outcomes on the ideas behind landscapes and landscape architecture. Which is the background for the hype of landscape in a wide range of disciplines? Can landscape work as an instrument, as an example and if so, how?

The conference addresses all disciplines dealing with spatial and societal phenomena of landscape. We welcome scholars from diverse disciplines as well as practitioners: landscape architects, artists, geographers, architects, urbanists, sociologists and others.

A detailed call for papers will be published on the conference website on September 8th.
