Kirchner and the Berlin Street: A Symposium

Friday, October 17, 2008

1:00 p.m.- 5:00 p.m.

The Museum of Modern Art

Theater 3, The Lewis B. and Dorothy Cullman Education and Research

Building, 4 West 54th Street

Ernst Ludwig Kirchner's series of Berlin Street Scene paintings is widely considered a highpoint in his career, as well as a milestone in the German Expressionist movement. On the occasion of MoMA's exhibition "Kirchner and the Berlin Street," international scholars in the field will present new insights on this defining series in the history of early modernism.

Moderator:

Deborah Wye, MoMA Chief Curator of Prints and Illustrated Books. Organizer of the exhibition.

Participants:

Charles W. Haxthausen, Professor of Art History, Williams College

Reinhold Heller, Professor Emeritus of Art History, University of Chicago

Katharina Henkel, Curator, Kunsthalle Emden

Jill Lloyd, Independent scholar and curator

Sherwin Simmons, Professor of 20th Century Art and Design, University of Oregon

Katharina Sykora, Professor of Art History and Media Studies, Braunschweig University of Arts
