In this discussion we hope to address a series of issues that arise in the wake of certain institutional developments (the emergence of „Visual culture“ environments across universities in the United States and Europe): Is there a distinctively European tradition of Visual Culture - and what are its antecedents, current manifestations, and prospects? In what ways might this tradition be conceived as different from the dominant Anglo-American one? How does one resolve the inevitable tensions between the local and the global in visual culture studies? How could a European visual culture studies be capable of confronting the vast plurality of visual objects and experiences in a postnational context?

17.30 Keynote Lecture: Keith Moxey (Columbia University): "Bruegel's Opacity: Between Presence and Meaning."

20.00 Dinner (Spisekroken).

Practical information: There will be a registration fee of NKR 500 for presenters (to be payable upon registration), which includes accomodation for two nights (at Terminus) as well as dinner on Friday and lunch and dinner on Saturday.
