Perspectives on the Public Sphere
Cinematic Configurations of "I" and "We"

International Film Studies Conference, April 23 - 25, 2009

Throughout its history, cinema has developed different modes of addressing spectators. Incorporating approaches from aesthetic and social theory, "Perspectives on the Public Sphere: Cinematic Configurations of 'I' and 'We'" investigates the public sphere within the context of the complex and varied contemporary media age. More specifically, the conference will focus on the reciprocity between the individual "I", which can - to simplify matters somewhat - stand for subjectivity, affect, and the individual spectator's perception, and the social "we" of film as a mass medium, which has frequently been the focus of various utopias and theories at the intersection of politics and aesthetics since the 1920s. The conference is conceived as an hommage to Gertrud Koch's work in and dedication to the fields of film studies, aesthetic and social theory.
