

Thank you, from H-Net

H-Net Donations

Dear H-Net Readers:

I am writing to express the deep appreciation of H-Net's editors and staff for the generosity displayed by so many of you in response to our recent appeal for support. The funds you provide go directly to maintain our operations and to keep our service free and open.

These occasions also bring in heartening testimony from readers that the efforts of our hard-working editors and staff really pay off for scholars, teachers, and students:

"This is an important service to the scholarly community, in fact it is an important scholarly community, and we can't assume it'll all be here for free...It has shown itself to be a serious, scholarly resource and relies to an extraordinary degree on volunteer labor. We should support it."

"The economic downturn further highlights the importance of H-Net as a means for connecting researchers and teachers in the humanities and social sciences. I continue to rely on H-Net as my primary source of information linking me to colleagues and significant information."

"The generosity of this community of scholars constantly overwhelms me."

If you have not yet had an opportunity to join your fellow readers in making a tax-deductible contribution, please consider doing so at

A contribution from each of our subscribers would fund H-Net's lists, announcements, and reviews services for years to come.

Gratefully,

Peter
