DIALOGUES IN DESIGN

A RCA/V&A HISTORY OF DESIGN POSTGRADUATE WORKSHOP

Dialogues in Design is a postgraduate seminar series set up by students from the RCA/V&A History of Design Department. The series is conceived as a workshop to share progress and problems in postgraduate research for students in and outside of the RCA. The aim is to foster the research community at the RCA and beyond and to connect theoretical, historical and material object-based research related to the history of design.

Research student from the History of Design department will curate each session, alternately acting as speakers and chairs, and will invite postgraduate students as co-speakers both within and outside the RCA whose own research operates in similar territories. The dialogue this creates will form the basis of a session that allows students to discuss the issues raised and reflect on their own research practice.

All welcome, drinks provided.
