

Kress Fellowships summer 2010

Jamie Northrup

The Middlebury Language Schools Kress Fellowships provides five fellowships for the summer of 2010 for art history graduate students to attend the Middlebury summer Language Schools, in French, German, Italian, or Spanish.

These fellowships are intended for graduate students in art history with a proposed focus on European Art History. Preference will be given to graduate students who have recently been accepted or are currently enrolled in the requisite program at a Ph.D.-granting institution in the United States.

Fellowships cover the comprehensive fee (tuition, room, and board) at the Middlebury summer Language Schools. They are merit-based and intended for exceptionally qualified individuals, and will be awarded on a competitive basis.
