

Webinar-Series: Objects, Images, and Spaces of Health (online, 14 Jan–9 Dec 22)

online, Jan 17–Dec 9, 2022

Jack Hartnell, UEA

Participants are invited to join this new monthly forum for sharing scholarly work connecting the histories of science, technology, and health, with histories of art, visual culture, and material culture in the premodern period.

Collaborating over solving problems - not critiquing polished papers - each month the Working Group will meet for an open discussion of short, pre-circulated texts written by group participants. Their contents will be broadly defined in all respects: we see "premodernity" as stretching backwards from the seventeenth century to antiquity; "health" as incorporating global histories of both institutional medicine and more vernacular practices and personnel of healing; and "visual and material culture" ranging from the built environment to the smaller-scale world of images, diagrams, tools, and other technical objects. We will also use this group as an opportunity to collaborate over resources, hosting a shared drive with historical, visual, and scholarly materials of relevance to group members.

To join the Group, visit our page on the CHSTM website (<https://www.chstm.org/content/objects-images-and-spaces-health-0>) and select 'Membership'.
