1 Postdoctoral Teaching Position (Geneva)

Université de Genève, Sep 20–Oct 26, 2012
Application deadline: Oct 26, 2012

Dario Gamboni

Postdoc Teaching Position
Université de Genève (Geneva, Switzerland)

A three-year postdoc teaching position in the history of modern and/or contemporary art is open at the Université de Genève (Geneva, Switzerland), starting on February 1, 2013. Teaching is in French and includes 2 courses (in principle one BA seminar and one MA seminar) per semester on chosen topics in the history of art from the 19th to the 21st centuries.

In addition to a PhD in art history and a sufficient command of French, candidates should have a teaching experience at University level and a publication record, as well as a research project for a second book. The position is not tenure-track but meant to help the selected candidate prepare for applying to a tenure-track or tenured position in another institution. The yearly salary is between CHF98,832 and CHF98,080.

Candidates should send an application letter, a CV with list of publications, copies of their MA and PhD degrees, a description of their research project, and a pdf of their PhD dissertation (if possible) and/or selected publications until October 26, 2012, to Dario.Gamboni@unige.ch. For information about the Department of art history and musicology of the Université de Genève, consult http://www.unige.ch/lettres/armus/istar/pages/index.php.

Reference:
JOB: 1 Postdoctoral Teaching Position (Geneva). In: ArtHist.net, Sep 20, 2012 (accessed Nov 19, 2026), <https://arthist.net/archive/3864>.