

Journal of Historians of Netherlandish Art (JHNA), Vol. 15, Nr. 2

Perry Chapman, University of Delaware

The Summer 2023 issue (vol. 15.2) of the refereed, open-access Journal of Historians of Netherlandish Art (jhna.org) is published. Two feature articles address artistic and cultural encounters between the Netherlands and Southern Europe and demonstrate the far reach of Northern European culture in the early modern period. Also in this issue, two JHNA Perspectives essays examine recent scholarship, and suggest directions for the future, in two methodological approaches, each of which has had a transformative impact on the study of Netherlandish art.

JHNA publishes peer-reviewed original scholarship, across a range of methodological approaches, on Dutch, Flemish, German, and Franco-Flemish art and material culture dating from the medieval period through the eighteenth century. We also publish state of research and critical essays, as well as English translations of significant articles originally published in other languages.

JHNA welcomes the submission of manuscripts from scholars at every career stage. We also encourage proposals for state-of-research and critical essays. See our newly revised Submissions guidelines.
