Elizabeth Howie, Coastal Carolina University

The Department of Visual Arts at Coastal Carolina University, accredited by NASAD (National Association of Schools of Art and Design), seeks applications for a tenure-track position as Assistant Professor of Art History to begin August 2024.

Candidates should be broadly trained in Western art history, with a primary research area focused on Early Modern art history. Responsibilities will include teaching a range of topics on Medieval, Renaissance, Baroque, and eighteenth-century art and/or architecture, as well as survey courses, and the development of upper level courses in the candidate's area(s) of interest. Candidates should also have teaching and/or professional experience in curatorial studies. Special consideration will be given to candidates who can demonstrate the ability to connect the study of the Early Modern world with global perspectives.

The successful applicant must hold the Ph.D. in art history at the time of employment. Undergraduate teaching experience beyond assistantships is desirable. A strong record of scholarly activity, including professional presentations and publications, is expected. Salary is nationally competitive.

Interested candidates must complete an online application at <http://jobs.coastal.edu> and to submit the following documents:

- cover letter
- CV
- a descriptive teaching statement that shows your implementation of different teaching practices for various student learning needs
- offprints of published articles or essays are encouraged
- contact information for 3 references, who will be contacted at a later date

Review of applications will begin December 22, and will continue until position has been filled.

Letters of Recommendation will be solicited from finalists in the search.
