

EMSE 2024: Sensory Subjectivities (Oxford, 6–7 Jun 24)

Kellogg College, University of Oxford, Jun 6–07, 2024

Registration deadline: May 23, 2024

Leah Clark

EMSE 2024: "Early Modern Sensory Experiences: Sensory Subjectivities", Kellogg College, University of Oxford (UK).

The Oxford Research Centre in the Humanities (TORCH, The University of Oxford) and The Open University invite registrations for the annual interdisciplinary Early Modern Sensory Experiences (EMSE) conference.

Interest in sensory experiences of the past has grown in recent years, with scholars engaging with interdisciplinary approaches in order to better understand historical lived experiences. This annual conference explores the visual, auditory, tactile, gustatory and/or olfactory experiences across the globe between c.1400 and c.1700.

This year's conference, 'Sensory Subjectivities', will welcome papers that consider sensory experiences as instances or reflections of identity and alterity and which discuss possible methodologies and approaches to this particular subject.
