

Lecturer in Architectural Studies, University of Manchester

School of Environment, Education & Development, University of Manchester, UK, Sep 02, 2024

Application deadline: Jun 12, 2024

Matthew Wells, University of Manchester

Lecturer in Architectural Studies - Healthy and Sustainable Cities.

We are seeking applications from candidates who specialise in architectural studies with a focus on architectural humanities and/or social studies of architecture and can contribute to research-informed teaching that complements our existing clusters of activity in the Manchester Architecture Research Group (MARG) and Manchester School of Architecture (MSA). The post will involve teaching at both undergraduate and taught postgraduate levels, supervising PhD students, as well as research and administrative roles as specified by the Head of Department.

We are particularly keen to hear from candidates with research expertise in healthy and sustainable cities. This post is being created with the aim of strengthening areas of teaching and research deemed to be of strategic importance within the Architecture department, and to develop research activity across departments within the School of Environment, Education and Development.

As an equal opportunities employer we welcome applicants from all sections of the community regardless of age, sex, gender (or gender identity), ethnicity, disability, sexual orientation and transgender status. All appointments are made on merit.

Our University is positive about flexible working – you can find out more here:
